

PRESS RELEASE

3rd September 2008

A Tennis Tournament in aid of BYHP (Working with Young People) was held last week at Bloxham School.

The event was a tremendous success, providing a glorious day out for some very enthusiastic tennis players and their families.

Coffee, tea and cakes provided entirely by volunteers all made for a quintessentially English day and a chance to enjoy the last of the summer sunshine and rain.

The winners, Brad Keenes and Andrea Randall were presented with two beautiful decanters, kindly donated by Villeroy & Boch. A silent auction, raffle and donations by some very generous supporters meant that £2000 was raised for BYHP.

BYHP is indebted to Simon Bradshaw for his enormous support and brilliant organisational skills in organising such an enjoyable and successful event, to all our sponsors and players and of course to Bloxham School for kindly allowing us to use their fantastic facilities.

BYHP has worked with over 400 Young People aged 16-25 in the last twelve months in Banbury and the surrounding area. Many of them have been made homeless through no fault of their own.
